could be kept up without a great tax. My idea would be reading rooms, dining rooms, bath rooms, a billiard room and whatever else eight to be included. You know how it is in New York—men couldn't do without their clubs, and some belong to three or four. My idea is, if we hanged a hundred men of the right kind at $50 initiation and the same for annual dness we could make it go. What do you say?

I said that for my own part I had seen something of club life and was able to get along without it; that I had known much more harm than good to come of it; that married men are much better off at home, and that single men too frequently make the club house the point of departure for a night of debanch. My young friend remarked that for the life of him he couldn't see why it need be so. I sasured him be thought of the life of Wheeling I am prepared to venture the opinion trait the gilded youth of this city are not standing in great need of a fashionatic club house idea, and to some of these I have suggested the thought of the club window the caught up before they go further.

Other persons have entertained the club house idea, and to some of these I have suggested the thought of the club house idea, and to some of these I have suggested the thought of the club house idea, and to some of these I have suggested the thought of the club hilded by the form the clubhouse—a diring club fashioned after the Beefsteak clab, the English model of itskind, the Papyrus club, of billedelphik and the help born of riving the coming summer, will be all that they oung the boston, the younge read to wenter and keep the soil all through the form weeds. invited, and these occasions are full of enjoyment. This is all of the club until the next monthly dinner. These clubs are distinctly not drinking clubs, though each member may have wine at his own cost if he so desires. Treating is forbidden—at least it is so in the Clover Club. The ordinary social club is an abomination—fit only for men who have no domestic responsibilities and who desire to go through without change to the grave. To that point it is the shortest of the short lines, and the conductor of that train punches the tickets with a pitchfork.

A Democrat of prominence in another part of the State addresses to The Whisperur a letter from which I take the following: "You don't seem to understand the inside of Joe Miller's appointment. The Senators have gone into the camp of the enemy and taken away one of the main supports. Don't you see that the Senators not only take away from that wing an exhaditor who is a shrewd politician, but they have now for their friend the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, a shrewd politician who can help them with the of the cows. Don't you see that the Senators not only take away from that wing an exauditor who is a shrewd politician, but they have now for their friend the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, a shrewd politician who can help them with the patronage of his office. This is the correct view of it." Who said it wasn't? I don't suppose that Camden and Kenna interested themselves for a man for the express purpose of making him stronger that he might fight them the harder. I don't suppose it is the life ambition of either of the Senators to make Governor Wilson United States Senator. It has not occurred to me that Governor Wilson united States Senator. It has not occurred to me that Governor Wilson would be highly delighted with the appointment of Mr. Miller, or that he would present to each of the Senators a gold-headed cane in recognition of their distinguished services to bim in this matter. They helped to elect Wilson, and then he declared war against them. Now those work of the senators to make governor will have no more influence with the Cleveland administration than I shall have are any other person who is

At the Opera House the other night, when the heavy villain had been brought to pay and justice had him by the throat, he was weak enough to appeal for mercy. As soon as the galleries caught the word there was a storm of indignation, and a shrill voice piped out "flats!" The startled me afterwards that he came near losing his composure and spoiling his scene. In another play a "gag" reference to "Wheeling, Pa.," set the galleries wild. Some day I shall write a book on The Gods of the Gallery. Won't it go?

Setting Out Current Bushes,

America Agricultural.

The most important point in setting out currant bushes is to set them out. Set them where you can cultivate on each side of them, and not against the fence or wall. As often treated, currants are a nuisance. The bushes soon become stunded and covered with moss, the catterpillars destroy the leaves and what few currants we get are small, unripe and pillars destroy the leaves and what lew currants we get are small, unitipe and nearly worthless. Why should they be otherwise? They are never manured, never cultivated or hoed, rarely pruned, and no efforts are made to destroy THE WHISPELUNG GALLERY.

A young gentleman who had just returned from a trip to the East, said to me, "Why can't we have a club in Wheeling that gentlemen would be glad to attend and support? We could have a handsomely furnished club house that could be kept up without a great tax. My lides would be reading rooms, daining rooms, bath rooms, a billiard room and whatever else ought to be included. You secure where a cultivate or hoed, rarely pruned, and no efforts are made to destroy the catterpillars until half the leaves are stripped from the branches, if any of our readers have such bushes, the first thing to do is to set out new ones on new land. Let the old ones remain until the new ones come into bearing and in the meanting give the old ones a dressing of manure cultivate or fork and hoe the ground then and keep down the weeds, afterwards would be reading rooms, daining rooms, bath rooms, a billiard room and whatever else ought to be included. Here in the Northwest the Posimaster General's name is pronounced just as it is spelled, Vi-las. Some of the Eastern papers are trying to make out that it is Vee-las or Vil-as, and even some that is Vee-lah. Now they ought to know better than the latter. He is a pure Democrat and gives his name no cockney or foreign twist. The original family name of the Postmaster General is said to have been Villiers, and his genealogical tree can be Villiers, and his genealogical tree can be traced back to Henry III. Belonging to the same family was the famous Villers, the Duke of Buckingham, under Charles I. But the family of our Postmaster Gen-eral has been in this country a century and the covery two hours during the day with the covery two hours during the day with the covernor will have no more influence with the Cleveland administration than I shall have, or any other person who is not in that line of business.

The riot has just begun. It is a very pretty fight as it stands, but it is full of a better promise. Between Wilson working the State for all it is worth, and the Senators keeping their eyes on national patronnese so as not to loose a trick, it's going to be more entertaining than a bull light. I said something like this to a Democratic friend who smiled, and asked. "Do you lose sight of Henry S. Walker defity laying banana skins in Wilson's Senatorial path?

I hear from St. Paul that Lewis Baker is making the Gibbe spin. He is putting new life into the paper, working up the circulation, and has his financial recompense in sight. You remember how glad certain men of his party were to have him emigrate. Yesterday I heard one of them say—well, it was semething like, "Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay," It may have struck you before that some people are very hard to please. I understand that Mr. Baker is willing to remain where he is and let things "go as you please" elsewhere.

Secretary Whitney's Start.

"Jay Goold presented W. C. Whitney with a check for $150,000," said a prominent Third street operator the other day, when it became known that Mr. Whitney was to be Secretary of the Navy in President Cleveland's Cablinet.

"At that time Whitney was quite a young man, and not a rich one dither, though his father was reasonably well off. He had just graduated from Harvard law school. Is looking over the charter of a certain railroad company he had discovered a flaw in it which made it absolutely of no effect, and he carried that information to Jay Goold, giving it to him voluntarily without any request for compensation. Gould immediately drew his check for the amount I have named and Whitney was a rich man at a bound.

"Gould, I believe, sold the stock of the railroad very heavily, and made several times that sum by the operation, for publication of time fact of the faulty charter broke the price down to almost nothing, and enabled him to cover his contracts at very low figures." The Bride and the Wedding Cake. A young lady about to be married wanted to startle the guests with an exhibition of her ability in house-keeping and cookery. So she made the wedding cake. The day after the wedding, most of those who ate the cake were sick. Thousands who ate the cake were sick. Thousands go from year to year, eating such indigesti-ble things, and are consequently ill with dyspepaia nearly all the time. Mrs. Nancy Collier, Tusbaloosa. Ala., says, "My niece has been relieved of dyspepaia and lung troubles by using Brown's Iron Bitters."
